Executive Summary

This is a study of apartment complexes in Anne Arundel County in 2020. The 2020 Apartment Study includes a total of 33,426 units in 336 complexes, including an estimated 3,473 units in 28 apartment complexes that are considered affordable or a combination of market rate and affordable units. Apartments in Anne Arundel County are clustered within and near the Annapolis, Glen Burnie, and Odenton zip codes. Eighty six percent of the total apartment units within the county are one or two bedroom units.

Based on the Apartments.com database, the vacancy rate for the County is six percent, and varies from one area to another within the County. Rental rates vary considerably within the county. Forty one percent of all units were $1,600 or more per month, while in 2022, 81% of all units were $1,600 or more per month.

Introduction

The Anne Arundel County Office of Planning and Zoning (OPZ) conducted previous apartment surveys in 1990, 1992, 1994, 1996, 1999, 2001, 2007, 2009, and 2018. Until the 2018 study, these studies focused on apartment complexes that included more than 10 units and was based on a survey that was filled out by property managers or owners. A new methodology was used starting with the 2018 report. In 2018, the data was collected from the Anne Arundel County Department of Inspections and Permits "Application for Operating License for Multiple Dwelling or Rooming House" forms. This is a more efficient and accurate way to collect data about apartments and allows us to gather data about apartment complexes smaller than 10 units.

The 2020 apartment study report focuses on presenting data and information about apartments only. It is not a complete inventory of all multi-family developments within Anne Arundel County. Multi-family residential land use can be defined as a building that contains multiple dwelling units, either owned by a single owner or multiple owners. These can be condominiums or apartments. The difference between apartments and condominiums is that apartment units are owned by a single owner whereas condominium units are individually owned.

The 2020 update of the report builds on the 2018 report and continues to use the Anne Arundel County Department of Inspections and Permits "Application for Operating License for Multiple Dwelling or Rooming House" forms. In addition, OPZ incorporated a new source of data, the CoStar database, which is the back end database that feeds into Apartments.com. Although the CoStar data does not include all of the smaller apartment complexes, it was a useful dataset to validate the county's data for larger apartment complexes and adds to the completeness of the dataset by including an inventory of apartments in the City of Annapolis. It also provided valuable data about rental costs and vacancy rates by apartment complex.

This report summarizes the number and type of existing apartment units within the County. Where available, rental rates are analyzed and reported. This information will be used in various studies and analyses by OPZ as a source of information to more accurately account for all households within the County and subareas of the County.

Background and Assumptions

For the 2020 Apartment Study, data was gathered from the Anne Arundel County Department of Inspections and Permits “Application for Operating License for Multiple Dwelling or Rooming House” forms and the Apartments.com dataset from the County’s subscription to CoStar. Data in this report are updated as of July 2020. Unlike in previous studies, this report includes a more accurate representation of apartments within the City of Annapolis. No telephone or email surveys were performed in this study.

The Apartments.com dataset was used to identify apartments within the City of Annapolis. The Anne Arundel County Office of Inspections and Permits does not have jurisdiction for apartment licensing in the City, so the County does not have detailed information about apartments within the City. There may be some smaller apartment complexes within Annapolis that are missed in this report, but the completeness of the data for the City of Annapolis is much improved from previous reports.

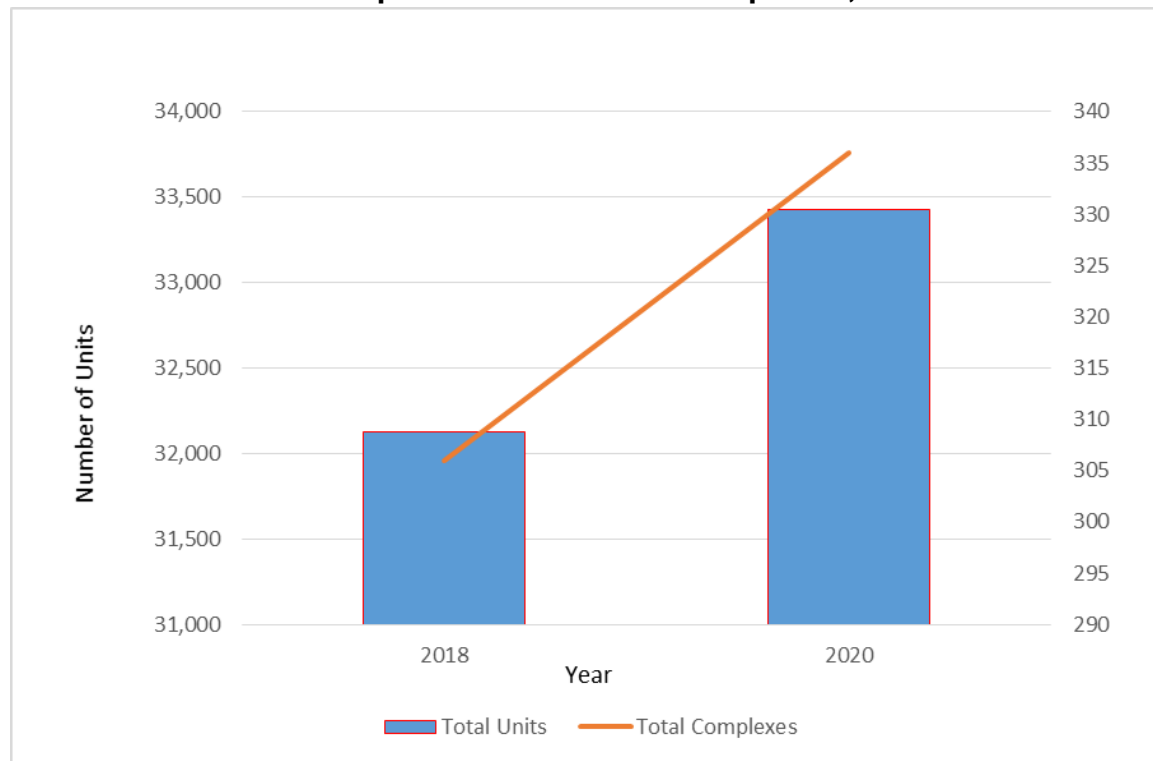

The Apartments.com database includes more information on rental costs, affordable units, and vacancy rates. It also helped verify locations of apartments where the Inspections & Permits form address information was inaccurate or not in an appropriate form for geocoding. The Apartments.com data is missing many smaller apartment complexes that the Inspections and Permits data includes. In order to use both data sources to their full potential without leaving valuable information out of the study or double counting, a crosswalk table was created to combine the datasets and use a unique identifier between the two datasets to relate them. When describing total apartment units by zip code and zoning district, the County Inspections & Permits dataset was used for the County and the Apartments.com dataset was used for the municipal area of the City of Annapolis. When summarizing rental cost data, affordability data, and vacancy rates, the Apartments.com dataset was used for the entire County, including the City of Annapolis.

References to locations are based on census zip code zones. In particular, when Laurel is referenced in this report, it is only the portion of Laurel located in Anne Arundel County. The incorporated City of Laurel is in Prince George’s County. Both Annapolis and Glen Burnie have multiple zip codes. Some Annapolis zip codes contain land areas within both the City of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County.

Number, Type, and Location of Apartment Units

There are approximately 33,426 apartments in Anne Arundel County, within 336 complexes. There was a four percent increase in the number of apartment units since 2018, from 32,128 in 2018 to 33,426 in 2020. There was an increase of 34 apartment complexes, from 302 in 2018 to 336 in 2020. While there have been new apartment complexes constructed, part of this increase can be attributed to the addition of the CoStar data to the study. The County also continues to add smaller apartment complexes to the database from the County Department of Inspections and Permits “Application for Operating License for Multiple Dwelling or Rooming House” forms. Chart 1 illustrates these trends.

In an analysis by zip code areas, Glen Burnie has the most units (11,089), followed by the Annapolis zip codes (7,064). These two areas are home to approximately 54% of the total apartment units in Anne Arundel County. Odenton, Hanover, Laurel, Severn, and Pasadena also have significant numbers of apartments. Several rural areas are listed in the dataset, primarily because of small apartment houses or complexes within these areas. Table 1 and Map 1 summarize these data.

Table 2 describes the distribution of apartment complexes and units by zoning district. More than half of the apartment units are within the R15 and R22 Residential Zoning districts. There are also many mixed use or commercial zoning districts that allow apartments.

A common way to look at the types of apartments in a community is through the number of bedrooms per apartment unit. This is one of the questions asked in the Inspections & Permits questionnaire and is a piece of information provided by the apartments.com data. In this case, the Inspections & Permits data were used for apartments in the County and Apartments.com was used for the City of Annapolis. Of the total apartment complexes in the County, 14 failed to report on the type of units that are within the complex in the Inspections & Permits form. The Apartments.com dataset lists a percentage of the total units that are in each size/type category by complexes. These percentages were converted to the number of units and included in the totals for the City of Annapolis. The Apartments.com categories match with the County's I&P form, so the data can easily be totaled. Table 3 illustrates that the vast majority of the apartments in Anne Arundel County are one and two-bedroom units.

Vacancy

The best source of information about vacancy rates within apartment complexes is the Apartments.com dataset. It reports the percentage of each apartment complex that are vacant. This allowed us to calculate the approximate number of vacant units per complex and total that information by zip code. The countywide vacancy rate is approximately six percent. Linthicum Heights has the highest vacancy rate, followed by Gambrills and Arnold. It is worth noting that there is a new apartment complex called Element that was under construction in 2020 within the Linthicum Heights zip code. Element has 384 units and Apartments.com was reporting a vacancy rate of 84%, which significantly impacted the vacancy rate for that zip code.

Affordability

In Anne Arundel County, the median household income is $100,798 (+/- $1,103) (2015 – 2019, US Census Bureau, American Community Survey). This is nearly $16,000 more than the state median $84,805 (+/- $465). The US Census Bureau estimates that 35% (+/-4.1) of the County's renting population spends 35% or more of their income on rent and utilities (2019 5-year estimates, US Census Bureau, American Community Survey). According to the 2019 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates, 3.0% (+/-1.0) of families in the County have incomes below the poverty level (2019 5-year estimates, US Census Bureau, American Community Survey).

Chart 2 shows that nearly half (47%) of all renters in Anne Arundel County spend at least 30% of their gross income on housing costs. This is slightly lower than the statewide total of 50.1%.

Table 5 shows the number of units with average rent costs by community in Anne Arundel County. This information is based on average rental costs by apartment complex and is from the Apartments.com database. It shows that nearly half of the total apartment units in the County have an average rental rate of between $1,400 and $1,800 per month. The data also show that the Annapolis zip codes (including areas outside the municipal boundary of Annapolis) have the most apartment units in the higher rental rate categories, followed by Laurel.

The Apartments.com database also includes information about affordable housing and reports the number of units per apartment complex that are considered affordable housing. It does not include complexes that are owned by the Housing Authority of the City of Annapolis. Approximately 11% of the 31,990 apartment units (total units from Apartments.com) are considered affordable and seven percent of the total apartment units represent a combination of market rate and affordable housing. The apartments that are considered affordable are either rent controlled, rent restricted, or rent subsidized. The information in Table 6 summarizes these data by city/zip code. Many of the communities that show a high percentage of affordable housing units are a result of apartment complexes that include both market rate and affordable housing. The dataset does not give an indication of the percentage of each of these complexes that are market rate versus affordable.

Conclusion

The 2020 Apartment Study includes a total of 33,426 units within 336 apartment complexes. Apartments in Anne Arundel County are clustered within and near the population centers of Annapolis and Glen Burnie, and in the area along the Baltimore-Washington corridor. The total number of apartment units included in this report has increased since 2018, representing a four percent increase. The vacancy rate in the County for apartments is six percent.

These data will be updated continually based on “Application for Operating License for Multiple Dwelling or Rooming House” forms and CoStar (Apartments.com). OPZ will periodically update this report using these datasets as necessary and will use the information to accurately reflect multi-family residential units in the County.
